Sabine von Mering is Associate Professor of German and Women’s and Gender Studies, and Director, Center for German and European Studies at Brandeis University. She studied in Cologne, Göttingen and at the University of California in Davis, where she earned her Ph.D. She has received honors both for her teaching and her research. She teaches German Language, Literature, and Film. She is also a member of the core faculty in Women’s and Gender Studies. Her most recent scholarly work focused on right-wing extremism. She is currently working on the role of climate change as a challenge for the humanities. As Director of the Center for German and European Studies she organizes lectures, conferences, and cultural events in the interest of promoting transatlantic dialogue. Her most recent book publication is Right-Wing Radicalism Today: Perspectives from Europe and the US (with Timothy Wyman McCarty, 2013).