As early as the 19th century, Germany and the Philippines have built strong cultural ties thanks to our national hero, Dr. Jose Rizal who, during his time, lived in Germany for quite some time where he wrote the second half of his novel Noli Me Tangere.

From then on, German entrepreneurs were introduced to the Philippines to expand and explore the country for possible trade businesses. Soon after, numerous academic establishments were built to strengthen the booming cultural exchange of the two countries, which includes the Goethe-Institut Philippinen.
