In this course, we will discuss movies spanning 1927 to today, ranging from black-and-white to technicolor, and depicting funny, sad, or even dreadful pictures and topics:

- The classic movie „Metropolis“ by Fritz Lang (1927): Why is this movie even today considered a must-see?
- „Run Lola Run“ by Tom Tykwer (1998): The ball is round. The game lasts 90 minutes. Everything else is in theory. How can a few seconds change a person's life forever?
- „The White Ribbon“ by Michael Haneke (2009): How does a childhood in a Protestant village in 1900 relate to the Nazi-Germany? A closer look upon Germany's difficult relationship to its own past.
- „The Silent Revolution“ by Lars Kraume (2018): Assimilation – Solidarity – Fate of an individual. What are the boundaries of civil courage?

Register for our movie course by 06.03.2019 and discuss the four movies with us. We are looking forward to your input!
